In a major policy state-ment, he promised a new high-speed passenger rail ex-periment and other transport

The first comprehensive policy announcement since 1967 called for a bigger management role for government transportation.

The transport minister said in the Commons that in developed parts of the country, advanced transport systems "must pay their way."

"This means that prices for transportation services will have to go up, likely more rapidly than in the past." The high-speed rail experiment will be in a "selected portion" of the densely-populated Quebec City-to-

Windsor, Ont., corridor.

But a background document, which Mr. Marchand said is not yet government policy, suggests buses are a better bet than passenger rail routes in the Windsor-Quebec corridor, which takes in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa onficials say the route is not likely to be either Montreal-Toronto or Montreal-Ottawa rail passenger service.

The government plans fur-ther discussion with the prov-inces on freight rate proposals and proposes consultation on towns and cities most needing improved transport service.

In addition, the government will proceed with construction of a $35-million Arctic ice-breaking cargo vessel. breaking cargo vessel.

It will move toward requiring transport companies to be Canadian-controlled.

Mr. Marchand tabled two background documents in the Commons. He said these are interim reports on passenger and freight transport and not yet government policy. The policy document does not mention grain movement problems, urban transit, a new policy on ports or policy for local air earriers. The minister said the ports policy will be announced later.

The vice-president's statment- because he declined to provide any supporting details - seemed certain to bring charges that the Ford administration was seeking to discredit a possible presiden tial candidacy of Sen. Edward Kennedy (Dem - Mass.) by tarnishing the reputation of his late brothers.

However, Rockefeller emphasized that the eight-member-CIA study commis-sion which he headed "did not have sufficient evidence to come to any hard conclu-sions" on the foreign assassination issue.

Appearing on NBC television's Meet the Press, Rochefeller first said, in describing why his commission neither drew nor made public any conclusions on the CIA assassination issue:

Before we tell you what the 1975 Plymouth Cricket and Dodge Colt are all about, we'd like you to know what the Chrysler warranty is all about.

It's one of the best reasons to buy a new car from us. Basically, the Chrysler warranty means that you're covered for parts and labour for as far as you can drive in the first year you own your new Cricket or Colt.

The first year's on us, and the mileage is unlimited (taxis and police cars excepted). That's the way we take care of the people who buy our cars:

We also give them a lot for their money

For instance, Plymouth Cricket and Dodge Colt feature reclining front bucket seats, full floor carpeting, an adjustable steering column, tinted glass, front disc brakes and plenty more all standard. There's a wide choice of models? coupes, hardtops, sedans, sports models and great little wagons, all available with standard shift or automatic.

No matter how you want to go small, we've got you covered.

Destroying the Jury System

time Dr. Henry Morgentaler has been acquitted on a charge of having performed an illegal abortion yet he remains in jail. Leaving aside the contentious social issue engendered by the term abortion, Morgentaler's case casts a dark shadow over the Canadian judicial system. In November 1973 the doctor was pronounced not guilty on a similar abortion charge in Quebec Superior Court. The acquittal was later reversed by the Quebec Court of Appeal. Following this odious example of double jeopardy, the Superior Court of Canada upheld the reversal plus an 18 month sentence handed down by the lower

Now Morgentaler has been acquitted for a second time. He faces a number of other abortion charges. Is the Crown going to appeal his acquittal each time a jury hands down a verdict of not guilty? In the second case the jury reached its innocent verdict despite advice from the presiding judge that Morgentaler should be found guilty. Not only does the law appear to be out of step with the people, it is ignoring the people's wishes in the case of these two juries. The latter issue has more far reaching consequences. Every time the government is unhappy with a jury's conclusions it has the right to appeal the verdict.

In effect, the reversal of the original verdict by the Quebec Court of Appeal destroys the jury system. What is the point of being judged by one's peers if the government is only going to reverse the decision? This sleazy Catch 22 scars a hallowed tradition of common law. It should be expurgated

As John Diefenbaker says, it is a dangerous thing when judges set aside the decision of a jury. Under our system a jury is a body of persons sworn to render verdict on questions submitted to them in a court of law. By its very nature the jury decision should be final in the vast majority of cases. In some cases, such as the civil rights murders of the early 1960s in the American south, a jury can be cynically unjust. But if higher courts reverse a jury's findings the potential for harm is far greater. Without the alternative of judgment by one's peers an appointed judiciary laying down the law will always be suspect as a creature of govern-

In a very real sense this is the issue brought into focus by the Morgentaler case. The jury system is negated. Appointed judges can overrule a jury of 12 good men or women. That one man languishes in jail after being twice acquitted on abortion charges should be enough impetus for changes in legislation. Instead, the government remains silent, as Conservatives and New Democratic Party members point out the injustice. The government should introduce new legislation to limit the power of appeal courts to ordering new trials. Dr. Morgentaler should be pardoned and released if Canadian justice is to live up to its reputation rather than rest on its laurels.

I read that Women's Centre, Women's Transition House, UVic Women's Action Group, Status of Women Action Group and Everywomen's Books demand "the right to control" their own body from Justice Minister Otto Lang. I am all for it. I assume that these women want this right as a free choice every time they lie Equally, I assume they want the free choice of sometimes not to control this activity, in which moment the body of somebody else is created, that of a little baby. Must We Stagger Along Blindly Until Economic Collapse?

Turner does concede that the government in its own spending program has not set any example. It is quite futile for the government to keep driving prices up and then cry loud for voluntary restraints on everyone except itself.

On such a course mandatory controls are inevitable. One wonders if the postwar generations, riding a 20-year boom simply abdicated their responsibilities and refused to face the facts.

Does this mean that we must stagger blindly along till we get hurt, till we reach economic collapse and massive

In present-day Germany, where the memory of their great inflation and collapse after the First World War still lingers, the government has in effect put the proposition to labor: Either live within reasonable guidelines or we shall cut back the money supply and face you with unemployment. (Such tactics would certainly not fit the Canadian political scene, though inflation in West Germany is less than six per cent and unemployment under five per cent.)

This is entirely in accord with Maynard Keynes, who held that so long as wages were pushed up ahead of products of labor, unemployment must result. Similarly when governments raise minimum wage levels they are largely substituting unemployment and more welfare payments for low wages. Our prob-lem today is to achieve acceptance of Such basic facts. In his General Theory, Maynard Keynes argued that the level of prices depended primarily on the level of

It doesn't win votes or make people popular, so political leaders in Ottawa Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, generally take the easier course of simply remaining silent on the subject.

The origins of our inflation can in some degree be traced back to the Keynesian theories popular after the Second World War. In other circumstances any thought of a temporary program of arbitrary price, wage and profit controls would be contrary to Liberal, Conservative, Social Credit, NDP philosophies. Today, however, when it has been clearly demonstrated that Ottawa's appeal for voluntary restraints and self-discipline have failed, that the government, even with its strong majority and recent mandate, is unable to inspire and rally the nation or to act, a period of compulsory controls is inevitable.

They argue that the nation is in a transition stage and a time of turbulence as the old orces are at work that inex ture equilibrium, in an altered or toward collapse.

And, they suggest, the time to make national choices to mitigate the dislocations is ritically short.

These ideas spring not so much out of theology and philosophy as they do out of scientific and technological research. It is the world of the computer that is now speaking to us — the very heart of the industrial process, ironically, that helped forge many of the forces creating untenable pressures. Thus, the premise.

Here at M.I.T. for the last three years, a group of do working under the guidance of Jay W. Forrester have been developing a model of social and economic behavior in the United States.

They are using the com-puter in attempting to fore-cast not only our lives but our children's and their children's Earlier efforts at M.I.T. had examined corporate behavior, pinpointing the factors that then eventually to stagnate. Next the systems dynamics him the work led into analyzing the troversy. behavior of cities.

Population the Key

MIT Professor Jay W. Forrester talks about growth and its limits:

growth and its limits:

It seems to me very clear that the most fundamental issue is population versus standard of living.

Everything else that is going on, all the other kinds of pressures, are ceated by rising total demand on the

We are moving into a situation where the higher the population, the lower will be the standard of living, and vice versa. That choice for the most part is not recognized as a choice,

But that fundamental underlying choice is being

But that fundamental underlying choice is being made whether we know we're making it or not. It's being made in terms of rising population if we don't face that issue more squarely than we have.

We've gone along these past 200 years with an economic framework that says production depends on capital and on labor, and that the standard of living depends upon the capital-to-labor ratio.

So we've tried to accumulate a larger and larger capital plant, and to accumulate that capital plant.

So we've tried to accumulate a larger and larger capital plant, and to accumulate that capital plant faster than population has grown so that the standard of living per capita goes up

Now if we say that production depends upon capital and labor and stop there, we are implicitly saying it doesn't depend on anything else. In particular, we're implicitly saying it does not depend on nature or on the environment. That's results been the cornerstone of the environment. That's really been the cornerstone of national policy and economic thinking — that production doesn't depend on nature.

The opposite extreme, and indeed it is an exaggerated extreme, would be to say that production depends on nature, that there is a certain maximum that one can pull out of the environmental system. If you take that exaggerated position, you're saying the standard of living does not depend on the capital to labor ratio, but on the population to nature ratio.

That changes our whole industrial and economic philosophy. It changes our wante mustral and economic philosophy. It changes social attitudes about where people fit in. If the total population is set by nature, then one has a decision to be made as to whether it's to be a high capital-productive system with a few people in large capital plants and lucome redistribution to support the other people, or whether an opportunity to work, a job, is a matter of right — that one wants a low capital-to-labor ratio in order that there can be jobs for people.

On the fundamental problem of population vs. the standard of living, there's no solution to this on the world basis that I can see. There is no world force that can do anything about it, there is no world body that has any great leverage.

Now if you do not solve it on an international Now it you do not solve it on an international basis, you've immediately given up the idea of international human equality, because you've said that each region, each country, each locality-maybe should have the right to make a decision on population vs. standard of living.

If they're going to have that freedom, they're going to end up with different standards of living.

Therefore you're not going to have material equality.

We're saying that one of the big changes will be in recognizing that there is this tradeoff. As soon as you recognizing that there is this tradeoff. As soon as you really focus on population, you must focus on everything else: on the legal structure, the constitutional structure, the religius structure, the traditions.

When we look at all of those, we find running through and through them a high degree of coercion toward increasing population. It is my feeling that if the degree of coercion were reversed, this would probably be sufficient to solve the population problem.

After talksociates here at MIT, I stayed up late one night going through many of Forrester's papers and speeches over the last few years.

Pock-marked them are the jargon and the terminology of the computer age: exponential growth, man-machine interaction, real-time control of computers and such

In every growth situation, in seconds or centuries of energy has been doubling each 10 years. For the world, population has been doubling every 30 years. A 20-year doubling time is typical of modern industrial society.

"Any growth that repeatedly doubles will, in time, over-whelm its host environment. At some time, growth pro-duces its own termination."

On the nature of cities: I see no solution for urban problems until cities develop the courage to plan in terms of maximum population, a maximum number of housing units, a maximum permissible building height and a maximum number of jobs. A city must also choose the type of city it wants to be. To become and remain a city that is all things to all people is

By helping the human population to grow, and by protecting man from the retaliation of nature, man-kind is showing the height of social selfishness toward the environment. One must ask, When is generosity a virtue, and when is it a sin against the world?"

Time, Forrester believes, is short to make decision to re-verse the trends. The next decade will be critical.

His implications are jolting. They lead toward a society with less individual freedom, more, government control. He raises these prospects:

Cities will be controlled in size and composition. Migra-tion to them might be banned. Building permits and water connections could be denied to ficient resources for those living there.

One consequence would be far more local control over the destines of towns and mu-nicipalities. Instead of the present similarity of our urban centres, there would be

A recent symposium in Sackville, N.B. — it happened to be on development problems facing the Atlantic provinces — reminded me that the real proof of the moral degradation of Canada lies in the devastating outbreak of symposia that's sweeping the country.

sonal development labs, and conferences on affirmative action planning and interactive personal auditing processes are minor blights by comparison. A symposium, my Concise Oxford concisely states, is "any drinking party." It is also "an ancient Greek after-dinner drinking party with music,

Lest there be any confusion about exactly what symposiasts do at symposia, the function of the symposiarch makes it disgustingly clear. He is the "toastmaster, feast-master"; and these days, a good symposiarch is not hard to

Since the bulk of Canadian symposiasts have a college education, you may be sure they know the word's roots. They know what they're getting into, and they're getting into it at sym-posia in every university town from east of Antigonish to west of Nanairho

What hope for this tormented land, if our intellectual elite avoids facing challenges by plunging into the sauce? Are the symposiasts fiddling while Canada burns? At Canadian symposia even the language is excessive.

* * * There are too many noses in the air, too many noses for news and I confess, too many Nova Scotians whose noses are blue. There are too many ears to the ground, too many cheeks by jowls, too many feet in mouths, fingers on the pulse of the nations, lips doing service, birds in hand, tongues that are forever forked and, for that matter, prongs that writers and speechifiers no longer try their hand at flashingly original expression, and readers and listeners let it all pass, like supermarket music, in one ear and out the other?

I hope the national symposium on how to rescue the English language will also study the tricky problem of what the concern for sexual equality is doing to linguistic integrity.

Now I believe in women's rights but I also believe in the English language and, here in Nova Scotia, the advance of the women's cause contributes to the deterioration of the zest and precision of the language.

I'm happy now with chairperson. I can even live with factories seeking forepersons. But a Halifax newspaper ad seeks a "general manager-manageress" and this not only gives the sanction of print to an abominably cumbersome word but also perpetuates the notion that no woman deserves the title "general manager." (And this in a town in which the name of the city manager — not the city manageress is Mrs. Constance Glube.)

is Mrs. Constance Glube.)

A power company wants to hire "journeyman-lineman — male or female." A hotel needs a "housemanwoman" and "chambermaids — male or female". The sexual confusion in Nova Scotlan help-wanted ads is almost Shakespearean (though he, at least, knew what he was doing with the language), and its height came in a recent ad for a "doorperson."

Apparently, a Cape Breton tavem needed a bouncer in a hurry. I know a 98-pound cocktail-lounge waitress who's looking for work so I showed her the ad. "I don't think I could handle it," sighed the fair young maidenperson.

THE AMANA RADARANGE

The greatest cooking discovery since fire

Up till now if you worked all day there was just no way to get a freshly cooked hot meal on the table in time for dinner. Not so anymore. The Amana Radarange lets you cook nutritious meals for yourself or a family in a quarter of the time required by dry heat cooking. Also for the first time you can have "spur of the moment" frozen food meals without waiting for the food to thaw, thanks to a unique automatic defrost control. And as well as time, your Amana microwave oven saves energy, cutting down 50%-75% on the electricity used. And after a hard day's work it's nice to know there's no burned foods to clean off the inside of your oven and no messy pots and pans in the sink. That's cause the oven cooks cool and you cook on your dinnerware or even paper plates if you want. So why not make life a little easier for yourself. See the latest miracle worker at the Bay ... the microwave Radarrange, made only by Amana.

Though I can't manage it, I prize very highly the invitation to speak to this year's graduating class at Queen Margaret's School in Duncan, if only to meet again Norah Denny and Dorothy Geoghegan who have run the school for going on

The Meses Denny and Geoghegan have something that seems somehow to have gone out of style. "Character" is the word. It holds a lot of meanings — toughness, generosity, inflexible standards of behavior, tempered with love. Every-inflexible that makes a great teacher. It is a terrilby thing, in short, that makes a great teacher. It is a terrilby old-fashioned quality, I know, but a metal that never loses its

I don't believe, necessarily, that a private boarding school has any advantages over the public school and, in fact, the two of our girls who went to Queen Margaret's went there mainly because my job at that time kept me going to the far corners of the world. But I think now that some of the strength of those two women rubbed off on them. That, really is what teaching is all about.

The Misses Denny and Geoghegan are said now to be writing a history of the school that will certainly contain their. own memoirs. I am hoping that at least one chapter will con-cern the heartbreak of almost every child in the first week or so at a boarding school and often just as terrible a time for the parents. I don't imagine it's any too easy on the teachers.

My wife still has the letters that were written in that time My wife still has the letters that were written in that this by our youngest daughter, Jenny, who seemed to suffer particular agonies in her first days there. In that same week my wife had a longer letter in which our daughter detailed all the 47 reasons why she hated Queen Margaret's, why she could learn so much more at her old school (pathetic promises here to work harder at her homework) and how much she missed us and the dogs. "P.S." it ended, "If it is okay with you I think I will go back to the life

At this point there was an "open house" for parents and my wife and I went to Duncan. We stopped first at the bar of the Hotel Tzouhalem for a neat vodka. Considering the time of day there seemed to be an extraordinary number of over-dressed people in the bar belting back similar fortifiers. As it turned out they were all parents preparing themselves for various ordeals ahead with their daughters.

It was late afternoon on a dark, threatening day. The oak trees were in the sullen droop of autumn and, looking out from the window, I could see the cars going by on the highway outside the school. Some with their lights on I could see, too, that there was a gasoline service station on the corner with a large sign on its roof, now blinking on and off through the oak branches and

Major Oil Savings Seen From Semi-Diesel Wankels

DETROIT (UPI) The conversion of all passenger cars and trucks to semi-diesel which rotary engines could save more than 500 million barrels of oil a year, a noted Wankel watcher contends.

The long-delayed engine, heralded a few years ago as a replacement for the present internal combusion, could make it to the market once it is switched from a gasoline-burning power plant to a die-sel, Robert Brooks says. In this week's automotive News, Brooks, an industrial hybrid Wankel would combine the best features of diesels with the qualities of the small Wankel power phnat.

The saving he predicted is in addition to the 40 per cent improvement in fuel economy planned by automakers, primary through vehicle size reductions.

conventional diesel engines would provide a similar en-ergy saving, but will not be widely used because they are heavy, expensive, hard starting, noisy and have smoke and odor problems.

and odor problems.

By contrast, he said, the bybrid Wankel for small cars would have fuel economy comparable to conventional diesels but would cost about the same as a conventional four-cylinder gasoline engine.

Tine gasoline Wankel rofary engine is now used in the Japanese-built Mazda. Gen-eral Motors, the prime backer of the Wankel, had planned to introduce it last fall in its Chevrolet Monza but ran into

MUSSO GOES TO THE WFL

VANCOUVER (CP) - British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League have dealt import running back John Musso to Birmingham of the World Football League, Jack Parker, Lions' general manager, announced Sunday.

Parker also announced the retirement of offensive guard Mike Lahood, 30, a two-year veteran with the Lions.

Musso, 25, went to Birmingham for an undisclosed amount of cash and player considerations to be announced later. He was waived by all teams in the CFL.

"John had expressed an interest in going to Birmingham since the WFL was formed," Parkér said.

Monroe Eley, 26, an import running back who had been with B.C. for four seasons, was placed on the CFL retirement list Saturday. Eley had not reported and the team was protecting itself by putting him on the retirement list.

and Victoria in a virtual dead-lock for the leadership in the four-team league.

Both of Victoria's losses were charged to Kern. The big righthander now has a 6-4, won-lost record. All four of his setbacks have been ad-ministered by the Magicians. Kern suffered his third de-feat Saturday when Magicians broke a 1-1 deadlock with two runs in the sixth inning while posting a 3-1 victory. Bates had won the opener, 2-1, on the pitching of Dave Ruthowsky and the hitting of

"We wanted to beat Gay-lord bad," admitted winner BASEBALL SCOREBOARD Dennis Eckersley, the Indians' rookie. "But now that we have, it's kind of sad."

Cleveland manager Frank Robinson took a different view, though. "We didn't want to beat him any worse than anybody else, but I get tired when I read about trades that come back to haunt you."

This trade, Robinson said, resulted not because of any animosity but because "he was getting the ball up." "That's one of his problems
... He had been giving up a a game."

Perry didn't give up any homers Sunday, but was tagged for 10 hits in six innings.

Kerry Dineen made his major league debut Sunday in the Yankees' outfield—flanked the same of eathers. And his by a pair of catchers. And his fielding prowess, coupled with Cattish Hunter's four-hitter, helped beat Chicago.

Besides Dineen, the Yanks' other outfielders were all-star catcher Thurman Munson in left field and third-string catcher Rick Dempsey in right. All three regulars—Roy White, Elliott—Maddox and Bobby Bonds—are nursing in-probably one of the shortest two-run singles in history to cap a four-run eighth inning that beat the Royals and kept the Red Sox a game ahead of the Yanks in the East. Blackwell tapped a Steve

Even Tots Think About Suicide

1453 DOUGLAS ST.

IN GOLD CROSS Shoes with Comfort

WASHINGTON (UPI) There are growing signs that some children 7 to 10 years old are trying to commit sui-cide by drinking household cleaners, medicines or other

Dr. Richard Moriarty, a pediatrician who heads the U.S. Poison Centre Network, said the children may be reacting to intolerable family situa-

He said in an interview that poison control centres should employ social workers who can visit the homes of victims to find out if-a poisoning was really accidental.

This is especially true, he said, in cases where children are involved in repeat poisonings or where more than one child in the same family is stricken.

Moriarty who teaches at the University of Pittsburgh school of medicine, said no firm figure are available, but there are believed to be 2.5

ings in the United States every year. Those include 1,000 to 2,000 deaths among children.

Accidental poisonings expected among children under five, he said, but the surprising statistic from his centre is that 10 per cent of the cases involve children ages 6 to 10.

"There are a few truly ac cidental cases, and some of the children in that bracket may be early drug experi-menters," he said. "But we have been taken by the number of kids who are think-ing about whiches at area?" ing about suicide at age 7-or.

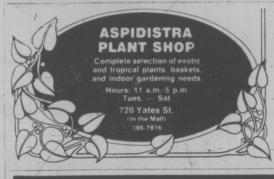

Moriarty helped establish an information exchange network among poison control centres which links the headquarters operation in Pitts burgh to centres in Seattle, Wash., Albuerque, N.M., St. Louis, Milwaukee, Madison. Wis., Saginaw, Mich., Buffalor, N.Y., and Baltimore.

Eventually he hopes 50 to 60 such centres around the U.S. will be linked by telephone, will be unked by telephone, with facilities to send information back and forth. Parents of poisoning victims can call the centres, receive advice and, if necessary, be referred to a local hospital

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 17-year-old girl, graduating from high school this June. My problem is my parents. They don't want me to have anything to do with my boyfriend, who is 19, because I've been impregnated by him three times.

Dear Mike: The Electro-Cruise (cruise control) on my 1972 Buick won't release when I step on the brake. Rather than take the car to the dealer, which is a hassle, I've simply stopped using the chuise control. But if there's an easy way to fix it myself, I will. Can you advise me?

Dear not: You've either got a short in one of your wires to the brake-release switch, or the switch is bad or malad-justed. If you're handy with electrical repairs, you might check; otherwise leave it to

Dear Mike: Here's a problem that's been getting steadily worse. About a year ago I started to be able to feel the accelerator pedal move in my 1968 Malibu. It's wiggling back and forth, not up and down. Now I know this sounds crazy, but it moves all by itself. It does it only with the engine running. I can get down under the dash and actually watch it wagging like a dog's tail. It's very discon-certing, and I have a feeling it's wasting gasoline. How do I bring it to a stop?

Dear Wag: I suspect your engine mounts are loose, and the engine's rocking is transferred to the accelerator linkage somehow. Check your motor mounts.

Dear Mike: My engine is very hard to start when it's hot. This is in a 1970 Torino Squire. Sometimes I'll have to wait an hour to let it cool down. I've had it to the shop a number of times, have paid out plenty of good money, but nothing has helped yet. I hope you can.

GETTING FED UP Dear Getting: Lots of cars have this problem, and there are many potential causes. The most common is flooding—too much fuel. Hold your foot all the way, down on the gas pedal for about three minutes, then start cranking (with your foot still down). Another possibility is a defect.

Another possibility is a defec-tive coil, which shorts or gets weak when expanded by heat. old wiring sometimes shorts out when hot but not when theatre.

Fun Theatre This Summer

A season in the fun would be an appropriate title for University of Victoria's Phoenix Summer Theatre rep-ertory program which begins June 27 at the campus theatre.

The series of three plays concentrates on comedy all the way from farce to a kind of wistful daffiness.

Opening the season will be Joe Orton's maturely farcical What the Butler Saw. A wild and witty spoof on sex, the and witty spoof on sex, the whole play takes place in the consulting room of a private psychiatric clinic.

It will be directed by Harvey M. Miller.

Play It Again Sam by Woody Allen opens July 2.

Director is graduate student Tony Bancroft whose production of Pinter's The Caretaker was a highlight of last season at the Phoenix.

Schreyer said the prime minister told him Friday afternoon in a telephone conver-sation neither the reports of the crude oil price increase ---nor those of an eight-cent-a-gallon price rise for gasoline or home-heating oil — are necessarily accurate. Nor is the July 1 date definite.

The Manitoba premier said he was told that none of the information contained in recent news reports should be regarded as final, and that the federal governmest had not finalized its decision on the matter.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday the federal cabinet had taken "some basic decisions" on price increases but declined to say how large they would after hearing that six Americans who registered at an old cottage near Lizard, England, all wanted hot baths both morning and night.

"The trouble with these damned Americans is that they bathe too much," Hendy said.

And so, in the actual deal, East would have played the heart queen on West's opening lead of the ace. Since it would have been chiving to West. lead of the ace. Since it would have been obvious to West that East couldn't possibly desire a continuation of hearts, West would have shifted to a diamond, the higher ranking of the two remaining suits (diamond versus clubs). As is, evident, East's ace could then have taken the setting trick.

Though I can't manage it, I prize very highly the invitation to speak to this year's graduating class at Queen Margaret's School in Duncan, if only to meet again Norah Denny and Dorothy Geoghegan who have run the school for going on

The Misses Denny and Geoghegan have something that seems somehow to have gone out of style. "Character" is the word. It holds a lot of meanings — toughness, generosity, inflexible standards of behavior, tempered with love. Everything, in short, that makes a great teacher. It is a terrilby old-fashioned quality, I know, but a metal that never loses its

I don't believe, pecessarily, that a private boarding school has any advantages over the public school and, in fact, the two of our girls who went to Queen Margaret's went there mainly because my job at that time kept me going to the far corners of the world. But I think now that some of the strength of those two women rubbed off on them. That, real-

The Misses Denny and Geoghegan are said now to be writing a history of the school that will certainly contain their own memoirs. I am hoping that at least one chapter will con-cern the heartbreak of almost every child in the first week or so at a boarding school and often just as terrible a time for the parents. I don't imagine it's any too easy on the teachers.

My wife still has the letters that were written in that time by out youngest daughter, Jenny, who seemed to suffer particular agonies in her first days there. Later she loved being a Queen Margaret's girl and was perfectly at ease—cried, in fact when she left—but in those early days, after 11 or 12 years behind her of total independence in the home, she was like a prisoner.

I had undertaken to buy her a Bible, a requisite among her books, but only a day or two after her enrolment I'd a brief, one-line note from her that made me wonder if it was a

"Dear Daddy," the note went. "Don't bother getting me-the Bible as I do not think I will be staying here. Love,

In that same week my wife had a longer letter in which our daughter detailed all the 47 reasons why she hated Queen Margaret's, why she could learn so much more at her old school (pathetic promises here to work harder at her homework) and how much she missed us and the dogs. "P.S.," it ended, "If it is okay with you I think I will go back to the life

I had thought and hoped that this would pass. My wife, who had gone to boarding school herself, said it was only a matter of time. But two weeks had gone by and there was not the slightest indication that Jenny had reconciled herself to

At this point there was an "open house" for parents and my wife and I went to Duncan. We stopped first at the bar of the Hotel Tzouhalem for a neat vodka. Considering the time of day there seemed to be an extraordinary number of overdressed people in the bar belting back similar fortifiers. As it turned out they were all parents preparing themselves for various ordeals ahead with their daughters.

At the school we watched a grass hockey game and then had lunch, at which I had the pleasure of meeting the incomparable Miss Denny. I explained that Jill, her older sister, had fitted right into Queen Margaret's, but that Jenny was still far from happy.

"I know," Miss Denny said. "It does happen, of course, but with Jenny's spunk and spirit I simply can't understand

Jill had invited me to see their beds in a dormitory on the second floor of the old building. After she had gone I sat there for a while on Jenny's cot in the empty, silent dormitory, trying to put myself in her shoes. It was late afternoon on a dark, threatening day. The oak trees were in the sullendroop of autumn and, looking out from the window. I could see the cars going by on the highway outside the school. Some with their lights on. I could see, too, that there was a myseline service station or the cornect the law of the service. gasoline service station on the corner with a large sign on its roof, now blinking on and off through the oak branches and

About 400 boats are docked in Mainland and Island ports, most of them centred on Victoria, Vancouver and Nanaimo as a protest against a 60 cents a pound offer by B.C Fisheries Association — 15 cents less than last year's Director Joe Garcia, of Bamfield, said trollermen want at least last year's price of 75 cents — "We can't possi-bly fish for less" — even though the salmon market has softened world-wide.

Garcia points out that trol-lermen in Washington and Oregon are getting 73 cents a pound for coho, "and most of our fish is marketed there (in the U.S.),"

He doubted that troll fisher men could accept 60 cents a pound and pay for higher operating costs to maintain their vessels. Fuel is more expensive than a year ago and 30-40 per cent more than last year and boatyard repairs and electronic work costs $20 an hour, Garcia said.

Meanwhile, other tradesmen are getting wage in-creases of 50 and 60 per cent, he declared.

Though I can't manage it, I prize very highly the invitation to speak to this year's graduating class at Queen Margaret's School in Duncan, if orly to meet again Norah Denny and Dorothy Geoghegan who have run the school for going on

The Misses Denny and Geoghegan have something that seems somehow to have gone out of style. "Character" is the word. It holds a lot of meanings—toughness, generosity, inflexible standards of behavior, tempered with love. Everything, in short, that makes a great teacher. It is a terrilby old-fashioned quality, I know, but a metal that never loses its

I don't believe, necessarily, that a private boarding school has any advantages over the public school and, in fact, the two of our girls who went to Queen Margaret's went there mainly because my job at that time kept me going to the far corners of the world. But I think now that some of the strength of those two women rubbed off on them. That, really, is what teaching is all about.

The Misses Denny and Geoghegan are said now to be writing a history of the school that will certainly contain their own memoirs. I am hoping that at least one chapter will concern the heartbreak of almost every child in the first week or so at a boarding school and often just as terrible a time for the parents. I don't imagine it's any too easy on the teachers.

My wife still has the letters that were written in that time by our youngest daughter, Jenny, who seemed to suffer par-ticular agonies in her first days there. Later she loved being a Queen Margaret's girl and was perfectly at ease — cried, in fact when she left — but in those early days, after 11 or 12 years behind her of total independence in the home, she was like a prisoner.

I had undertaken to buy her a Bible, a requisite among her books, but only a day or two after her enrolment I'd a brief, one-line note from her that made me wonder if it was a

"Dear Daddy," the note went. "Don't bother getting me the Bible as I do not think I will be staying here. Love,

In that same week my wife had a longer letter in which our daughter detailed all the 47 reasons why she hated Queen Margaret's, why she could learn so much more at her old school (pathetic promises here to work harder at her homework) and how much she missed us and the dogs. "P.S.," it ended, "If it is okay with you I think I will go back to the life

I had thought and hoped that this would pass. My wife, who had gone to boarding school herself, said it was only a matter of time. But two weeks had gone by and there was not the slightest indication that Jenny had reconciled herself to

At this point there was an "open house" for parents and my wife and I went to Duncan. We stopped first at the bar of the Hotel Tzouhalem for a neat vodka. Considering the time of day there seemed to be an extraordinary number of overdressed people in the bar belting back similar fortifiers. As it turned out they were all parents preparing themselves for various ordeals ahead with their daughters.

* * * At the school we watched a grass hockey game and then had lunch, at which I had the pleasure of meeting the incomparable Miss Denny. I explained that Jill, her older sister; had fitted right into Queen Margaret's, but that Jenny was still far from happy.
"I know," Miss Denny said. "It does happen, of course.

After she had gone I sat there for a while on Jenny's cot in the empty, stlent dormitory, trying to put myself in her shoes. It was late afternoon on a dark, threatening day. The oak trees were in the sullen droop of autumn and, looking out from the window, I could see the cars going by on the highway outside the school. Some with their lights on. I could see, too, that there was a gasoline service station on the corner with a large sign on its roof, now blinking on and off through the oak branches and the growing darkness. "Home," it said, and then, blinking regularly on and off, repeatedly flashed the same word, "Home, Home, Home, conversion of all passenger cars and trucks to semi-diesel Wankel rotary engines could save more than 500 million barrels of oil a year, a noted Wankel watcher contends.

The long-delayed engine, heralded a few years ago as a replacement for the present internal combusion, could make it to the market once it is switched from a gasoline-burning power plant to a die-sel, Robert Brooks says.

MUSSO GOES TO THE WFL

VANCOUVER (CP) - British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League have dealt import running back John Musso to Birmingham of the World Football League, Jack Parker, Lions' general manager, announced Sunday.

Parker also announced the retirement of offensive guard Mike Lahood, 30, a two-year veteran with the Lions.

Musso, 25, went to Birmingham for an undisclosed amount of cash and player considerations to be announced later. He was waived by all teams in the CFL.

"John had expressed an interest in going to Birmingham since the WFL was formed," Parker said.

Monroe Eley, 26, an import running back who had been with B.C. for four seasons, was placed on the CFL retirement list Saturday. Eley had not reported and the team was protecting itself by putting him on the retirement list.

Four Canadians were also placed on the retirement list. They are tackle Lanny Boleski, 34, tight end Lefty Hendrick-32, and defensive backs Wayne Holm, 27, and Bob
